

ATTENDEE WORKBOOK

The Executive Brand Intensive

One afternoon. One executive. One launched personal brand operating system.
IGNITE Center, Norcross GA · 1:00–4:00 PM ET

How to use this workbook

Three sections. Work them in order. (1) Complete the pre-work before you walk in. (2) Use the in-room prompts during each of the six blocks. (3) Tick off the 15 deliverables as they ship. End of day: sign your Brand Operating System summary and commit to the 30-min weekly cadence on the last page.

Pre-work checklist (bring this to the room)

☐ Current bio (any length)

Even the stale one. We rewrite it in Block 2.

☐ LinkedIn profile URL

We replace the About section live in the room.

☐ 2–3 past posts, talks, or articles

Source material for your voice profile.

☐ Company URL + one competitor URL

Feeds the Brand Assessment in Block 1.

☐ Three topics you'd publish about

Seeds your three content pillars.

☐ One usable headshot (any quality)

We generate the exec-grade set from it.

In-room prompts

One short exercise per block. Write by hand or type — your call.

BLOCK 1 · 1:00–1:30 PM

Foundation — Who you are on the record

Lock the positioning, three pillars, audience, and proof points every future asset inherits from.

The one sentence that should define how the market sees me:

My three content pillars (not five, not seven):

The white space my category leaves open — that I can credibly own:

BLOCK 2 · 1:30–2:00 PM

Voice — Sound like yourself at scale

Capture tone, vocabulary, and cadence so every future asset sounds unmistakably like you — not generic AI.

Three words that describe my voice when I'm at my best:

A sentence from my past writing I want every future draft to echo:

What I will paste into my LinkedIn About before Block 3 starts:

BLOCK 3 · 2:00–2:45 PM

Signature Content — The Authority Trio

Three publish-ready pieces — Op-Ed, POV post, framework carousel — each doing a different job in your authority engine.

My Op-Ed thesis in one sentence:

The stance the rest of my category is too polite to take:

The name of my proprietary framework (named frameworks become moats):

BLOCK 4 · 2:50–3:30 PM

Distribution & Repurposing

Convert one idea into five channels in 40 minutes — the multiplier most executives never operationalize.

The subject line of my first newsletter issue:

The opening line of my 5-minute keynote:

The day + time my 14-day calendar will auto-publish:

BLOCK 5 · 3:30–3:55 PM

The Compounding System

Wire the operating system so you never need us, an agency, or a ghostwriter again.

The one real prospect I'll run the research → asset loop on, in-session:

The day of the week + time my 30-min cadence will run:

The metric I will actually track (inbound · citations · invitations):

BLOCK 6 · 3:55–4:00 PM

Commitments & the 90-day cadence

Public commitment is the accountability mechanism. Each exec states three commitments aloud to the room.

The post going live TODAY:

The article going live THIS WEEK (with publish date):

My 90-day cadence: day + time + calendar block confirmed:

The 15 deliverables — check each one as it ships

By 4:00 PM ET, every box on this page should be ticked.

Brand Foundation

- ☐ Brand Blueprint
- ☐ Brand Assessment Report
- ☐ Voice Profile
- ☐ Three bios (50 / 150 / 350 words)
- ☐ Executive Headshot Set

Publish-Ready Content

- ☐ Op-Ed (800–1,200 words)
- ☐ POV post (contrarian, publish-ready)
- ☐ Framework carousel (7 slides)
- ☐ Keynote opener + Q&A talking points
- ☐ Newsletter issue (subject + body)

Compounding System

- ☐ 30-Day Authority Sprint
- ☐ 90-Day Newsletter Arc
- ☐ 14 days of scheduled posts
- ☐ Three saved pillar presets
- ☐ Personal Brand Operating Manual

My Brand Operating System (one page)

Fill this in by 3:55 PM. This is the page you keep.

Positioning (one sentence):

Three content pillars:

Primary audience:

My #1 proof point:

The named framework I own:

Channels I commit to publishing on:

The metric that matters most to me:

The 30-minute weekly cadence

This is the entire ongoing time commitment.

10 min	Review	What landed last week. What didn't. What to amplify.
10 min	Capture	One observation from this week becomes next week's POV.
10 min	Approve	Approve the next 7 days of scheduled posts in your voice.

Public commitment

Stated aloud to the room at 3:55 PM. Signed below.

The post I am publishing TODAY:

The article I am publishing THIS WEEK (date):

My 90-day cadence — day, time, calendar block:

Signature

Date